Hi Nick

Thank you for contacting me about this, I am the right person, I was the Administrator of the ADM-HEA Subject Centre and I can confirm that, so long as the entry cites the original url as you intend to do, we are happy for you to archive the pdf download.

I hope that this is enough information, please let me know if you need anything else from me.

For information, I am now working in a different department at the University of Brighton (hence the signature!)

Best wishes

Jenny

Subject: Repository permission for ADM article.

Hi Jenny. I hope I'm sending this email to the right person – apologies if not. I work on NECTAR, the research repository for the University of Northampton. A member of staff has submitted an article from the Art/Design/Media website for inclusion, along with the full text of the article. This was provided as a web archive, but what I would like to do is archive the PDF download from your site. I am hoping this is permissible – I'm afraid I haven't been able to find any copyright or policy information on the site.

The link for the article is:

<http://www.adm.heacademy.ac.uk/resources/case-studies/arts-university-student-mentors-and-gallery-peer-leaders-partnerships-for-learning>

The author, John Butcher, has submitted the information to the repository, so if copyright remains with the author there's no problem. We are happy to add any information you might require to our item coversheet, and the repository entry cites and links to the original URL above (you can see the entry at <http://nectar.northampton.ac.uk/3609/> - the full text link is secured until we establish permissions).

If we are able to host the article on NECTAR then it will be freely available online – we don't restrict access in any way.

If we're unable to use the published article then we can host an author's pre-print, if this is acceptable.

Hopefully that makes sense – if I've come to the right place and you need any further information, please let me know.

Many thanks,

Nick Dimmock
