This work has been submitted to NECTAR, the

Northampton Electronic Collection of Theses and Research.

http://nectar.northampton.ac.uk/4284/

Creator(s): Rose, H. and Siddall, G.

Title: Reading lists - time for a reality check?

Date: 2012

Originally presented to: Librarians’ Information Literacy Annual Conference (LILAC 2012)

Conference URL: http://lilacconference.com/WP/past-conferences/lilac-2012/

Version of item: Presented version
Reading lists – time for a reality check?

Hannah Rose and Gillian Siddall
Setting the scene

- University of Northampton
- Foundation Degrees – Education and Health
Action research

Identify an issue

Plan an intervention

Plan

Act

Reflect

Observe

Find out what students think

Review with academics

Implement the annotated reading lists

Transforming lives, inspiring change
Reflect

- Previous research
- Anecdotal evidence
- LIRG Research Award 2011

An investigation into the use of reading lists as a pedagogical tool to support the development of information skills amongst Foundation Degree students.
Plan

Read

- Literature review

Sample

- Identified research sample
  - Using School contacts

Research

- Planned research methods
  - Focus groups, interviews, reading list list analysis

Consider

- Annotated reading lists

Transforming lives, inspiring change
Act

- Reading list analysis
  - Developed reading list checklist
  - Selected a sample of Foundation Degree reading lists
Use of labels

- Core: 38%
- Essential: 9%
- Recommended: 19%
- Indicative: 9%
- Suggested: 5%
- Useful: 10%
- Other: 10%

Transforming lives, inspiring change
Sample reading lists

- Only 42% of information on reading lists is correct
- On average 23% of the books on reading lists are out of date
- 25% of books on reading lists are available as eBooks, but only 3% are labelled as such
- On average, books make up 73% of the sample reading lists
- The average number of sources on a reading list is 34.5 items, the most is 59, the least is 22
Act

- Redeveloped reading lists

- Interviewed academic staff

Transforming lives, inspiring change
Observe

- Student focus groups
  - Different subjects
  - Different levels
- Ethics
- Recognising our limits
- Bias

Chris Powis, Director
Library and Learning Services

Transforming lives, inspiring change
Reflect (round 2)

- Analysing focus group transcriptions
- Thematic analysis

Direction
- Sign post

Model
- Developing skills

Scaffold
- Access to resources
- Student perceptions and tutor expectations

Reading list

Transforming lives, inspiring change
“It can also give you an idea, even if you can’t get the books, sometimes just reading the titles can give you ideas. Whereas if you were given nothing, you probably wouldn’t know where to start at all.” (Yr 1 student)

“...so if you know you need to use more journals you can look in the journal bit.” (Yr 1 student)

“...when you’ve been out of study for a while it’s nice to have it as a guideline and then you can go to those areas and generally find more focused areas of your own particular setting from these.” (Yr 2 student)
“It does make me chuckle when I get the odd reading list and I look and I think: typo, spelling mistake, error, and then we get penalised!” (Yr 2 student)

“I once found a book that was on the reading list... But it actually had nothing to do with the topic. And I found myself reading it thinking it must do but it was... I think it was just a bit of a mistake.” (Yr 2 student)

“...the inconsistencies... their own individual styles... where the journals have been referenced slightly differently. Some use a comma, some use bold, some put full stops... I’m always cautious of just directly copying straight from the reading list!” (Yr 2 student)
Scaffold

“I think reading lists play an important role because it’s like being thrown into a swimming pool with lead boots on and no life saving device otherwise, and I think, it might change further on down the course, but I think particularly for new students the reading list is absolutely invaluable.” (Yr 1 student)
Justification for research

“...sometimes I think the reading list is helpful. Whereas if you’re stuck what words to use in these search engines... You look at the reading list and it speaks a word ‘manipulative’ and you think, well I’ll try that and boom, boom, boom, you’ve got loads of words.” (Yr 2 student)

“I think because they give quite a variety on book lists as well you can always find something that suits your reading.” (Yr 2 student)

“If you find a core text and you do some work from it you’ll find a reference in the book that leads you on.” (Yr 1 student)
Watch this space!

Transforming lives, inspiring change
Questions?

Transforming lives, inspiring change