The Miracle of the Spring

1
If I follow a white cloud, one white cloud in a blue sky, perhaps I’ll find the place where water waits.

Or maybe the cactus wren
who drinks from white blossom, will show me where
the flower of water opens.

If I sip the burning air as if it were a question perhaps I’ll learn to taste the smell of water.

At night the brilliant stars are raindrops in heaven.
Each of them ready to fall as the light of water.

2
In the bed of a dried-up river
I found a broken boat swept away by floods
and stranded there.

Today I’ll repair its hull and heal the gash
where its floating
was eaten by a stone.

Tonight I’ll make an oar from a desert tree
and row myself to sleep
by following a star.

Tomorrow I’ll drift on a lake and go wherever I’m taken until in the end I find the source of the spring.

3
The desert opens its mouth
to sing of water,
as if the sand was asking
to be a beach.

Once, a lake was here:
under the surface are fish
made out of stone,
but still swimming.

Go down deep enough,
and you’ll find the place where a wave
is waiting to break.

Under our feet is a sea,
I feel it call in my blood as if I were a fish
who longed for the ocean.
I went to the desert
because I was so dry
I knew the sand and rock would be like my skin.

I came to the desert
because I wanted to taste water that fell as rain where the light was young.

I stayed in the desert because I learned its name was a drop which washed me clear of all my days.

I became the desert
because I wanted you to come and let me show you
what it means to drink.

Under these rocks
I hear the voice of water speaking a cool language beneath these scorching stones.

The soft voice of water asking if I am thirsty, how can it know I am dry
as an autumn leaf?

O water rush to touch me,
gush and dash in streams.
O let me hear the tears
a mountain cries.

O water speak to me now and I’ll listen by drinking.
O let the voice of water sing in my mouth!
